

A scatter plot showing data points (blue dots) distributed around a central horizontal line. The plot includes a thick horizontal line representing the mean, flanked by two thinner horizontal lines representing the standard deviation or confidence interval. A vertical line segment intersects the horizontal line at the center. To the right of the plot, there is a large, light blue shaded area that tapers to a point on the left, representing a distribution or probability density function.